Definitions

Direct-to-Consumer (DTC): refers to a shipment of wine sent from a winery to a consumer's home or work for the consumer's own personal use.

Federal On-Site: In November of 2002, President George W. Bush signed the Department of Justice Appropriations Authorization Act, which included a provision allowing wine, purchased while visiting a winery, to be shipped to another state. Purchases must be in accordance with state law in that the consumer could have legally carried the same amount of wine back on their person as the winery is now able to ship to the consumer. This does not allow the consumer to join a wine club or to make a purchase to be shipped at a later date.

Off-Site refers to a shipment made on behalf of a consumer who places the order via phone, fax, or internet.

On-Site refers to shipments made on behalf of a customer who is places the order on the premises of the winery.
